Canadian Election Study, 1993 (CES 1993)

Étude électorale canadienne 1993

Overview
Type	Canadian Election Study
Identification	CES-E-1993
Series	The primary mandate of the Canadian Election Study is to provide a thorough account of the election, to underline the main reasons why people vote the way they do, to indicate what does and does not change during the campaign and from one election to another, and to highlight similarities and differences between voting and elections in Canada and in other democratic countries. The second mandate is to contribute to the development of scientific knowledge regarding the motivations of voters and the meanings of elections and election campaigns in democratic societies. The third mandate is to assemble a rich set of data about Canadians' attitudes and opinions on a wide variety of social, economic, and political issues, and to make that data publicly available to researchers in political science, sociology, economics, communications, and journalism.

Pre-question	Now let's talk about how the election is going for each party. We will be using a scale which runs from 0 to 100, where 0 represents NO chance for the party, 50 represents AN EVEN CHANCE, and 100 represents CERTAIN victory. You may use any number from 0 to 100.
Literal question	The CONSERVATIVE party's chances of winning IN YOUR RIDING? (Using the 0 to 100 scale where 0 represents NO chance for the party, 50 represents AN EVEN CHANCE, and 100 represents CERTAIN victory.)
Notes	A random half of the respondents (cpsrn15=1) were asked about the parties' chances at the riding level, and then about the parties' chances at the national level. A random half of the respondents (cpsrn15=2) were asked about the parties' chances at the national level, and then about the parties' chances at the riding level. The order of delivery of the parties at the national and riding level was random, based on a value stored in variable cpsrn16.
